Drive-thru ban is in the works

By Ralf Kircher
Staff Writer

An ordinance banning drive-thrus at restaurants and liquor stores jumped its first hurdle in the legislative process in front of a standing-room-only crowd at Tuesday's Planning Commission meeting.

With a unanimous vote of 7-0, the commission cleared the path for swift passage of the ordinance after hearing testimony from scores of citizens and two engineering firms that had completed studies on the philosophical and technical effects of drive-thrus on the community.

The ban could stop McDonald's from opening a fast food restaurant on the island. It is widely believed that outlawing drive-thrus would eliminate the lucrativeness fast food chains now see in Sanibel.

When introducing the proposed ordinance to the commission, Planning Director Bruce Rogers stated, "In my opinion what you have in front of you today is an innovative technique that can [achieve Comprehensive Land Use] Plan objectives."

Rogers and the commissioners were quick to point out the generality of the proposed ordinance.

"This is not a hearing on the development of any single parcel of land," Rogers noted. "The ordinance is general in nature."

Lane Kendig, of the Mundelein, Ill. company of the same name, summarized his report in which he recommended against permitting drive-thrus. He specifically cited the lack of need, the detrimental impact on community character, and litter and traffic

Hearing officer issues recommended order

Dunn: Most police positions should be in bargaining unit

By MaryJeanne McAward
Staff Writer

Hearing Officer Barry Dunn issued his recommended order to the Public Employees Relations Commission (PERC) Monday, May 24, regarding what police department positions should be included in a proposed bargaining unit for the Sanibel police force.

Earlier this year, in the face of dissatisfaction with the city's pay plan and low morale, a number of employees began a movement to unionize the department.

That movement eventually led to an administrative hearing between lawyers for the city of Sanibel and the Florida Police Benevolent Association (FPBA) seeking to represent the proposed unit, before Dunn Thursday, April 8.

According to FPBA Attorney Joan Stewart, Dunn's recommended order states police officers, detectives, dispatchers and the weigh station sergeant be included in a rank and file bargaining unit.

"Detective" is an assignment and not a position, Stewart noted.

Dunn further stated he believed road patrol sergeants had a supervisory conflict with officers, and therefore are appropriately served by a separate, supervisory unit.

He did not exclude them from the rank-and-file unit based on a managerial conflict, Stewart noted.

Many municipalities have separate rank and file, and supervisory units, Stewart added.

The city, represented by Orlando labor attorney Wayne Helsby, contends a total of nine positions including police dispatchers, road patrol sergeants and an administrative sergeant do not belong in the unit.

However, both sides agree the proposed unit will exclude three Sanibel sergeants currently serving in lieutenant's jobs.

Helsby contends police dispatchers, who are not sworn officers, do not belong in the unit.

According to Stewart, if either side does not agree with the PERC's eventual ruling, they have 20 days from the 24th to file exceptions to the recommended order with the PERC.

The PERC has 90 days from the 24th to issue its final ruling.

Absent a court ruling overturning it, that ruling is final.

Once the bargaining unit is defined by the PERC, it will determine who will be eligible to vote for or against the union in a future election.

If the majority of members of the bargaining unit vote for the union in a future election, the union will be certified and at that point the city must sit down and negotiate a contract.

Hurricane seminar packed

By Max Friedersdorf
Staff Writer

Sensitized to danger from south Florida hurricanes by last August's Hurricane Andrew, more than 300 Sanibel and Captiva residents jammed the Sundial Beach & Tennis Resort auditorium Wednesday afternoon for the annual Sanibel hurricane meeting.

Federal, county and local officials and meteorologists addressed the audience's concerns about the 6-month hurricane season which starts officially next Tuesday June 1, and lasts until next November 1.

Deputy Director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, Jerry Jarrell, recalled that Hurricane Andrew was the most expensive natural disaster to strike the U.S. in history, causing $25 billion in damages, mostly in southern Dade County.

Jarrell also reported that Andrew, the third most powerful storm to hit the U.S. this century, was unique in intensity, speed of movement and small, concentrated size.

Jarrell indicated the most important lessons for Sanibel and Captiva residents to learn from Hurricane Andrew were (1) evacuate if in a vulnerable area; (2) staying in well-constructed homes can be safer than being on the highway; (3) even sturdy homes can be made safer by securing doors and windows more securely; garage doors, sliding glass doors and windows should be more heavily protected to avoid being blown out by the wind and debris, (4) mobile problems which would arise from drive-thrus.

Kendig warned the commission of a course of "month after month of making half a dozen land use decisions and one day waking up and realizing everything has changed."

He commended Sanibel for having the foresight to study what may be an eventual problem before it is too late to solve it. Kendig noted that many communities who hire him already have a problem, and they ask him how to go about backtracking.

He shared his general rule of thumb in city planning and applied it to Sanibel: "[The city] ought to consider what are the likely cumulative aspects of the decision to allow [drive-thrus]."

His report was met with applause and cheers from members of the public in attendance, whereupon Planning Commission Chairman Ernie Klaudt, attempting to restore order, quickly put a stop to the show of approval.

"We are not here to lynch anybody. We are here to hear testimony," Klaudt reprimanded. "If you can't control yourself, please leave the room."

Tampa Bay Engineering representative Richard Doyle then gave an overview of his company's recommendation to prohibit drive-thrus. Doyle cited traffic congestion as the main reason for his recommendation.

Upon the completion of the summaries, in which both companies assured the commission that Sanibel does indeed have a unique character,

Commissioner Louise Johnson commented, "I find it reassuring to hear some of the things said that I've been saying for the last 13 years."

homes are the most dangerous and vulnerable.

WINK-TV Chief Meteorologist Jim Reif commented that the down side to living on a beautiful paradise like Sanibel is the hurricane situation.

Reif said an Andrew-size hurricane seemed to agree, and in their comments they voiced their support for the ordinance.

Among those who spoke out: McSPOIL co-chairman Dick Walsh noted his organization had gathered 11,000 anti-McDonald's signatures; Charlotte Baker projected traffic accidents if a fast food drive-thru were in place; John Adler expressed concern over the proliferation of many fast food restaurants; Alex Zletz commented on the increased air pollution; Kay Strong bemoaned the litter problem; and Alicia Volante went so far as to say, "Perhaps those who need to use a drive-thru don't belong on Sanibel."

At each specific mention of "McDonald's," a visible wince shuddered through the entire commission.

Klaudt continually reminded the audience that the ordinance under consideration is not meant to target any one company. He suggested finally that if people were so set on naming a particular establishment, they might use the term "Ernie's Bar and Grill."

Henceforth, "Ernie's Bar and Grill" became a shibboleth to the Gileadites opposed to McDonald's.

Until the one soul who was unafraid of the taboo pronunciation stood up to speak.

Attorney for McDonald's Steve Hartsell stood alone before a hostile crowd as the sole critic of the ordinance.

Hartsell questioned the conclusion that drive-thrus are "undesirable." Why conclude that those customers who use the drive-thru are less desirable than those who walk in and sit down, he questioned.

Hartsell maintained that a drive-thru would be beneficial to the handicapped and elderly citizens of the community—those who might have trouble getting out of their cars and eating inside.

"To say that these people should not be allowed on Sanibel is ridiculous," he stated.

"I submit this ordinance is here today by an emotional response of those who oppose a national food chain," Hartsell continued.

Hartsell then asked for a continued first reading of the ordinance so that he might have time to study and argue the Tampa Bay Engineering report.

hitting Sanibel head-on could cause a 20-foot tidal surge.

Sanibel is more vulnerable than the east coast of Florida to storm-spawned tidal surges because Gulf waters are shallower, Reif explained.

Reif said the most dangerous part of the hurricane season is from mid-August, through September into early October.

Reif recommended the best hurricane protection for Sanibel and Captiva residents is to have a storm plan and leave early.

Reif said that south Florida "does not have a hurricane problem; we have a people problem." Reif said that because of the state's exploding population that now ranks fourth in the nation with 13 million people, that the hurricane season has become a major threat to life and property.

Sanibel Building Official Max Anderson

told the audience that homes built on Sanibel since July of 1983 were constructed under the current building code ordinance which requires structure strength to withstand winds of 130 mph.

Anderson said homes built under the old ordinance would not withstand the 130 mph winds, and suggested owners might want to have their homes inspected.

Anderson observed that 85 percent of residential damage from Hurricane Andrew resulted from roof failure, and City Building Inspectors are paying particular attention to roof and wall construction.

Anderson urged all home owners to consider retro-fitting their homes to strengthen vulnerable areas. Anderson indicated he doesn't have the manpower, but urged homeowners to seek private contractor advice.

Cada appealing recommended termination

By MaryJeanne McAward
Staff Writer

Attorney Robert Burandt has appealed to Sanibel City Manager Gary Price for a hearing about the recommended termination of his client, Sanibel Police Officer Brent Cada.

The appeal is based on denial of his client's due process, according to the attorney.

The date for the hearing has not yet been set but Burandt said the city asked for a two-week extension to prepare, to which he agreed.

The transcript from a lengthy pretermination hearing May 12 is still being prepared and both sides need to review it prior to the appeal hearing.

Price has the final decision in the matter.

Cada was suspended from the island force April 16 on charges of breaching police security by revealing the identity of confidential police informants in a multi-jurisdictional task force operation.

After a lieutenant with the Combined Law Enforcement Against Narcotics (CLEAN) task force complained to Sanibel Police Chief Richard Plager that after an express warning from a task force agent, Cada's off-duty activities were still interfering with a task force operation. Plager opened an internal investigation.

That was followed by the pretermination hearing Wednesday, May 12, and the chief's recommendation that the officer be terminated effective last Friday, May 21.

According to the internal investigation, Cada's offense was similar to a violation of the city personnel code, specifically a Group III offense which is punishable by termination.

Burandt said while he is currently going through the administrative process and feels the first hearing was unfair, if he feels the second, upcoming hearing is unfair he may file federal litigation.

This may take the form of an unfair labor practices suit against the city.

The city is currently in the early stages of negotiating with the Florida Police Benevolent Association (FPBA) which is seeking to represent police department employees in a proposed, police bargaining unit.

Cada, the senior road officer in the department, was vocal in his desire for a unionized department.

He was hired on a temporary basis in November, 1986, and became a full-time officer in October, 1987.

Historical Museum adopts new name in line with expansion

Expansion of the existing Island Historical Museum has prompted changing its name to Sanibel Historic Village and Museum. The facility located at 950 Dunlop Road has featured the Clarence Rutland home, but will soon also encompass the 1927 Bailey Store when it opens to the public in November.

Miss Charlotta's tea room and the tiny Reed post office are standing in the wings awaiting restoration to enhance the "village" aspect. Already part of the display is a vegetable garden planted by Jody Brown with a sampling of crops grown here during Sanibel's agricultural heyday.

Another offshoot of the expansion is the need for additional volunteer help. Mary Bell, chairperson of docents, emphasizes the need for people interested in clerical or other work as well as docents who act as guides within the buildings. A workshop is scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday, June 7 at the Rutland house for current docents and those who wish to join the staff.

For more information call Mary Bell at 472-1812, Barbara Johnson at 472-0329, or the museum itself at 472-4648.

New radio room, tower set for police station

By MaryJeanne McAward
Staff Writer

A five by 14 foot addition to the wing of the Sanibel police department will house the department's VHF Alert radio equipment, which operates on 155.085 mhz, and amateur radio equipment, in a project scheduled for completion Wednesday, June 2.

Officer Al Dobbs with the Sanibel police department said the city's current radio tower and the small, 10 foot by 10 foot radio room beneath it were on the site of the new Sanibel library. The 10 by 10 structure will be kept by the city for possible future use; the old radio tower is being dismantled and removed by the company erecting the new tower.

The library construction project is funding the approximate $30,000 cost of the whole project, he added.

This includes a 120 foot, self-supporting tripod-type galvanized steel tower, set in more than 76 cubic yards of concrete. The tower is built to withstand winds of 166 mph at its top.

Currently lying in pieces next to the department, it will be put together in two sections like an Erector set. The bottom part will be set in place, then the top will be lifted into place, Dobbs said.

The radio equipment will be shielded by the most advanced lightning protection technology available, Dobbs said, and hooked to the city's 95 kilowatt emergency backup generator.

While smaller than the old radio room, the new one allows someone to use the equipment without leaving the shelter of the building and makes accessing the equipment much safer, Dobbs said.

Accessing the old radio room required climbing an extension ladder.

Moving the heavy radio equipment to its new home will be done via front-end loader—putting the bucket up to the old room, bringing the equipment to the elevator at city hall and trundling it through the police department, he added.

The Police Department's new antenna will soon be erected.

Sanibel wins in Take Pride contest

By MaryJeanne McAward
 Staff Writer

Four Sanibel organizations were the only winners in Lee County in the annual Take Pride in Florida competition sponsored by the state Department of Natural Resources.

The barrier island was home to more winners than most counties in the state.

Winners were the Children's Environmental Education Program, a partnership effort between Sanibel Elementary, staff at the J.N. "Ding" Darling national wildlife refuge and the "Ding" Darling Wildlife Society; staff and volunteers at the J.N. "Ding" Darling wildlife society; a partnership between the Native Plant Nursery at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation and Island Water Association; and Visitor's Television and the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

The awards were presented Friday, May 14, Saturday, May 15, and Sunday, May 16, at Tree Tops Park near Fort Lauderdale, during May which is National Take Pride in America month.

Take Pride in Florida is a statewide recognition program focusing on the stewardship efforts of Floridians who participate in the Take Pride in America program, a permanent program in the U.S. Department of the Interior.

The awards recognize the most outstanding stewardship activities occurring each year and are intended as an incentive for widespread citizen involvement.

The Children's Environmental Education Program introduces children in grades one through five to mangrove, wetland and beach dune ecology.

Sanibel students from each grade are paired with other students in the same grade for environmental programs at the refuge and elsewhere on the island. The program also includes a summer environmental education program which focuses on the biological sciences and conservation.

The refuge staff and volunteers were honored for their active support of the junior duck stamp contest and conservation program, as a way to inform and educate students, from kindergarten through twelfth grade, to conserve, protect and enhance wildlife, especially migratory waterfowl and their habitats, for the continuing benefit of the public.

Of the 700,000 visitors to the refuge each year, 210,000 pass through the Visitor's Center where from April through July, the state's 100 winning Federal Junior Duck Stamp designs are exhibited and the conservation program explained.

The Native Plant Nursery and Island Water Association teamed up to educate residents about water conservation and restoration of wildlife habitat on public and private land.

Island Water Association supplied nursery staff with lists of high water users and new users, a vehicle and financial support. Nursery staff in turn helped educate the public about the values of Xeriscaping—landscaping using native vegetation—and water conservation.

Arts

A review

Barrier Island Center currently hosts two shows

By Ralf Kircher
Staff Writer

Two exhibits of local artists may be seen in the Barrier Island Center for the Arts Founders and Phillips Galleries throughout the summer months.

The Sanibel-Captiva Art league has 64 works by nearly 30 island artists on display in the Phillips Gallery. In the Founders Gallery may be found 54 paintings, drawings and sculptures serving as a retrospective of 1992-1993 BIG Arts workshops. Twenty-two artists who participated in the classes are featured.

The San-Cap Art League show is almost a "greatest hits" show of favorite local artists, many of whom have had shows of their own throughout the past year. The exhibit offers one an introduction to some of the island's finest artists.

If one is unfamiliar with the works of perennial favorites such as Liz White, Jean Dean, Phil Rasmussen, Pat Cleveland, or Carol Hagerman, the exhibition is the perfect place to get acquainted.

Several of the selections, however, seem to have been taken from different periods within the artists' careers. A complete change in technique in the works of some who have more than one piece on display betrays the struggle every good artist must suffer through until he discovers his own personal style. It is almost as if the artists were asked to submit remnants from their studios as well as their newest works.

Marion Alexander's three works represent this more than any others. On display are "Sanibel Marina" and "Chapel by the Sea," two oils, as well as a watercolor of the Sanibel Lighthouse. Perhaps it is only the different media to blame, but the oils and the watercolor appear as if they were done by completely different artists. It is to Alexander's credit that she is not afraid of venturing into a new media.

Other artists who may display fewer works are equally impressive.

Mary Keogh's "Still Life with Melons" is a large acrylic which is more a study in color than the form of fruit or the subject itself. Watermelon pink bursts forth from a background of deep green and blue.

Subject matter in Floryne Karlin's two oils is again almost secondary to her impressionistic technique of portraying complicated patterns of light. The liveliness she achieves with the mottled light penetrating thick trees is remarkable.

Other works in the show contain fanciful innovations that create a refreshing variety to the long line of oils, watercolors and pastels.

Sheila Tardosky's "Seagrape Collage" appears to be a pastel drawing of seagrapes, but on closer inspection, each leaf is revealed to be a page clipped from the L.L. Bean catalog.

Patricia Kearney's "Inside Cat, Outside Cat—The Pyramids," a painting on silk, is the brightly colored world of the imagination. It is a surreal dream-scape of a small child in which cats hang in mid-air and everything else is abstracted and out of place by intense sensation.

Many of the same artists in the Phillips gallery may also be seen in the retrospective show in the Founders Gallery. Jean Dean, Nancy Jones, Carol Hagerman, Billie Elder, and Sheila Tardosky all have dual representation.

But some of the most intriguing works are by those whose artistic scope may not necessarily be wide enough for a show of their own.

Lola Katchen's works "Young Tarzan" and an untitled work of a wedding scene in which the bride and groom have the heads of goats seem to scream unintelligible symbolism. "Young Tarzan" is a pastel of a young man intertwined in ropes and vines with an ape in the background looking on bewildered. It is easy to empathize with the ape. Even more mystifying is the goat-headed bride and groom.

Not all the works are quite so tough to fathom, however.

Jack Lockhart's "What if" is an oil of Columbus' ship sailing off the edge of a great square globe.

"Catch of the Day," a watercolor by Marianne Ravenna, is simply a painting of a dolphin with a fishing fly beneath.

Nancy Jones has produced what will probably be the show's favorite and what will prove to be a long-term favorite at BIG Arts. It is a cartoon-like watercolor of six happy people having a wonderful time painting, and it is called simply "BIG Arts Class."

Most of the work in the two shows is for sale. Prices range from $10 to $1,500. The shows may be visited from 1-4 p.m. daily. For more information call 395-0900.

Naiivete and innocence personify Sanibel students' art exhibit

By Ralf Kircher
Staff Writer

Fifteen Sanibel Elementary School students' works may be seen in the 13th Annual Arts in Schools exhibition at the Lee County Alliance of the Arts. Designed as a showcase for young artists, the Lee County Arts Educators Association and Nationsbank are sponsoring the exhibit in the William R. Frizzell Cultural Centre.

Approximately 600 works representing art classes from 34 Lee County public and private schools are displayed. The artwork by elementary and middle school students ranges from woven wall-hangings to papier-mâché masks; from watercolors to collages; from pen and ink drawings to pastel portraits.

The children's works portray the naivete and innocence of youth that cannot be found in a show of adults' works. It is for this reason, and not perhaps for the overall artistic merit inherent in the pieces themselves, that one should go and relive his youth. To view the children's artwork is to step back in one's own lifetime. Looking at the pictures, paintings, drawings and various other pieces brings back the days when construction paper, rounded scissors that chew apart hands, and Elmers School Glue were a ubiquitous part of life.

It also brings back the envy for that talented girl in third period art class who started out able to cut and draw absolutely straight lines, and then went on to draw wonderful pictures that would win her at least the title of teacher's pet.

There is some truly budding talent exhibited in the show—well past the stages of family portraits with "Mommy, Daddy, and Me" stick figures standing tall next to a two dimensional house. And the appeal of the works goes well beyond the immediate family. Dismissing this show simply because of these youngsters' primarily single digit ages would be a terrible mistake: one must remember that the Chinese artist Yanli was only seven when she gave her first international exhibit. Under the instruction of art teacher Jaye Boswell, Sanibel's contingent has supplied the show with five block prints of local animals, five Indian-patterned collages, and five brightly colored geometric woven hangings.

Becky Armitage, Vanessa Goas, Kari Halverson, Ryan Hawkins, and Hanna Raven comprise the second graders from Sanibel who have the honor of seeing their work in the show.

Fourth graders Justin Gulnac, Leighana Luckenbill, Rael Mayeron, and Jesse Wood, and fifth graders Jonathan Fucella, Jose Garcia, Geoff Goas, and Caitlin Meyer are also represented.

Controlled burn beneficial to wildlife, environment

By Ralf Kircher
Staff Writer

While the mainland burns from raging brush fires and people flee their homes from advancing flames, here on Sanibel men are paid to set fire to the island.

Staff from the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge and a team from the Florida Panther National Wildlife Refuge conducted a controlled burn over 27 acres of vegetation on the Bailey Tract last Monday, May 24.

The refuge burns various sections of its acreage every year to renourish the land, as well as to control non-native species such as the Brazilian Pepper. According to refuge manager, Lou Hinds, wildfire used to be a natural part of the ecology.

"If you talk to some Sanibel old-timers, they'll tell you of big, big fires that would sweep across the island," said Hinds, as he watched the crews lighting the brush.

But as the island was built up, and as the fire department grew more efficient, wildfires became less common, he explained.

While Hinds wet down the information kiosk near the main entrance of the Bailey Tract, he said burning the vegetation is like providing it with a natural fertilizer.

"Within six weeks, this will look like it did before we burned," Hinds commented.

He predicted that after only three weeks—sooner if it rains—noticeable green growth will have returned.

The flames drew nearer the kiosk and an unusually large number of lizards scurried frantically about, running from the fire. Hinds said the effects on wildlife are minimal, and in fact many species benefit from the new growth as a result of the burn. He asserted that most animals instinctively head for wet areas or underground tunnels such as gopher turtle burrows.

"You won't see a scene like that in 'Bambi,'" he stated, referring to the point in the movie at which all the animals of the forest flee encroaching flames. "That's only in the movies."

Minutes after this assurance, however, a creature suspiciously resembling Thumper bounded from the fiery brush, unscathed but understandably worried.

"If you watch the films of the big fires they had out west a couple years ago, you'll see elk grazing while the fires blaze in the background," Hinds went on. "Fire is a natural part of the ecosystem, and as long as animals know they can get to safety, they remain calm."

Although "Thumper" looked anything but calm, he looked no worse for the wear, and if Hinds is right, Thumper will have new grass sprouts on which to feed in just a short time.

The principle difference between the controlled burns on the refuge and the fires that ravaged Estero last Sunday lies in the word "control."

The "Ding" Darling team and the Florida Panther team are experts at containing the fires they start. At the Florida Panther Refuge alone last year they burned 45,000 acres without incident.

Randy Druckman, assistant manager of "Ding" Darling, explained that the area burnt Monday on the Bailey Tract was contained by natural barriers as well as trucks with pumps and water tanks.

The field was bordered by Tarpon Bay Road on the eastern edge; on the south side a canal prevented flames from escaping; on the north border a levy separated the burn area.

Toward the west, the crews watered down a boardwalk and "backfired" up to the boardwalk.

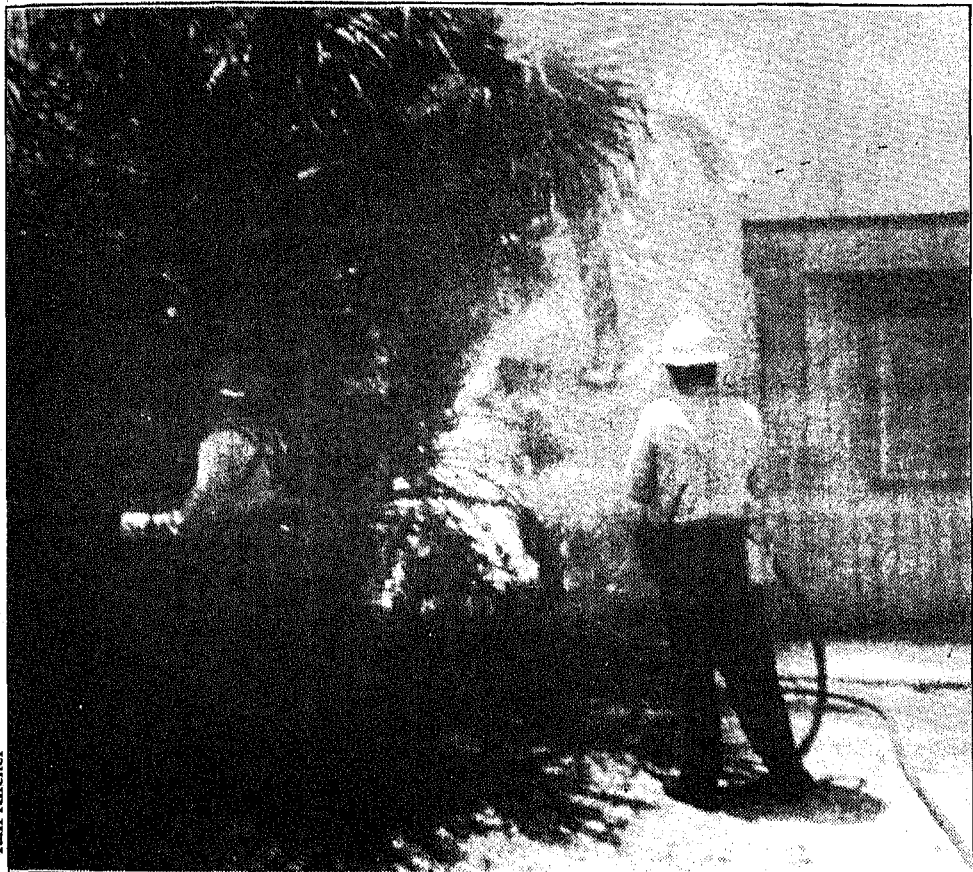

Lighting backfires gets rid of flammable material along the edges and creates a wide border which can contain the main fire.

Even with the strong breeze that gusted across the tract Monday, Druckman maintained, "The chances of the fire burning out of control are minuscule."

In fact, the wind aided the burn teams.

"We need a good strong wind to burn out all the old vegetation," said Hinds.

As a safety precaution, crews with hoses stood ready, and members of the crew followed the burnt-out swath with "fly-swatters"—long handled tools with a flap of rubber on the end—to snuff out any remaining hot spots.

Staff from J. N. "Ding" Darling work the controlled burn.

Brush fire erupts off Los Colony Road

By MaryJeanne McAward
Staff Writer

A brush fire off Los Colony Road Tuesday afternoon, May 25, started when a cabbage palm brushed a power line, according to Sanibel Assistant Fire Chief Don Fry. Two smaller fires were started by embers from that fire later that day. None of the fires threatened homes, Fry added.

The fire department was alerted to the first fire at about 2 p.m. and responded with two trucks, four paid firefighters and about a half-dozen volunteers, he said.

The fire was fought from Los Colony Road.

Personnel from the Sanctuary golf course helped fight the blaze, Fry added.

The burned area was about 100 feet by 100 feet, Fry said.

Twenty minutes into the fire, there was a second flare-up in the Dinkins Lake Road area, from an ember from the first fire. That fire was fought from Dinkins Lake Road and burned an area about 30 feet by 30 feet.

At about 7:30 p.m. as a fire fighter arrived in the area to check on the site of the fires, a call came in from a resident of the area advising of another fire.

Fry said this small fire was about 100 feet from the other two areas and was most likely started by an ember in the top of a cabbage palm from an earlier fire.

Paid firefighters and volunteers responded to this call.

Fry advised people, especially those living in wooded areas, to keep underbrush 30 feet away from homes, and keep cabbage palms trimmed of dead fronds.

"There's nothing wrong with having trees by your house—just don't let fuel (dead vegetation) accumulate in them," he said.

Cape Kennedy displays wonders of NASA

By MaryJeanne McAward

Staff Writer

A freeze-dried ice cream sandwich...a Robert Rauschenberg collage, "Hot Shots," in a gallery of 'space art'...the monolithic Rocket Garden...the wonders of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration facility on Cape Kennedy put the old television icon, "I Dream of Jeannie," to shame.

Based in Cocoa Beach, Florida, not far from Cape Kennedy, that early situation comedy about an unlikely romance between an astronaut and a lovely genie in a bottle played for years before the backdrop of the nation's fledgling space program, and gave Hollywood flash and spin to the astronaut program.

The landscape of modern life is shot through with technological spinoffs from the space program from the 60s through today—from indestructible fibers and incredibly strong alloys, to tires and medicine and exercise machines.

But listen carefully to the finely-tuned technological whirr at the heart of the shuttle shots...the great brain trust that sends men and honeybees and Magic Johnson jerseys into space and explorer spacecraft far beyond produces something far more subtle than a better tire...a rebirth of wonder and an affirmation that money spent on this program really does go to a great great cause.

Beginning with a look at a road map of the coastal area surrounding Cape Kennedy, one notices there are a lot of roads that dead-end...into "Govt. Reserve—Restricted" territory.

From Cocoa Beach, south of the government installation, the arc of beach to the north ends at the shuttle launching pads, from that distance the size of a quarter held at arm's length.

There, in the midst of the Merritt Island National Wildlife Refuge, shuttles and various other rockets are launched.

Locals say even a few miles away, the dirt jumps five inches off the ground when the shuttle roars up.

Launches are announced on a sign at the entrance to Cape Kennedy; like high school football games they're an event watched by denizens of the many coastal towns in the area who work and play in the shadow of launches.

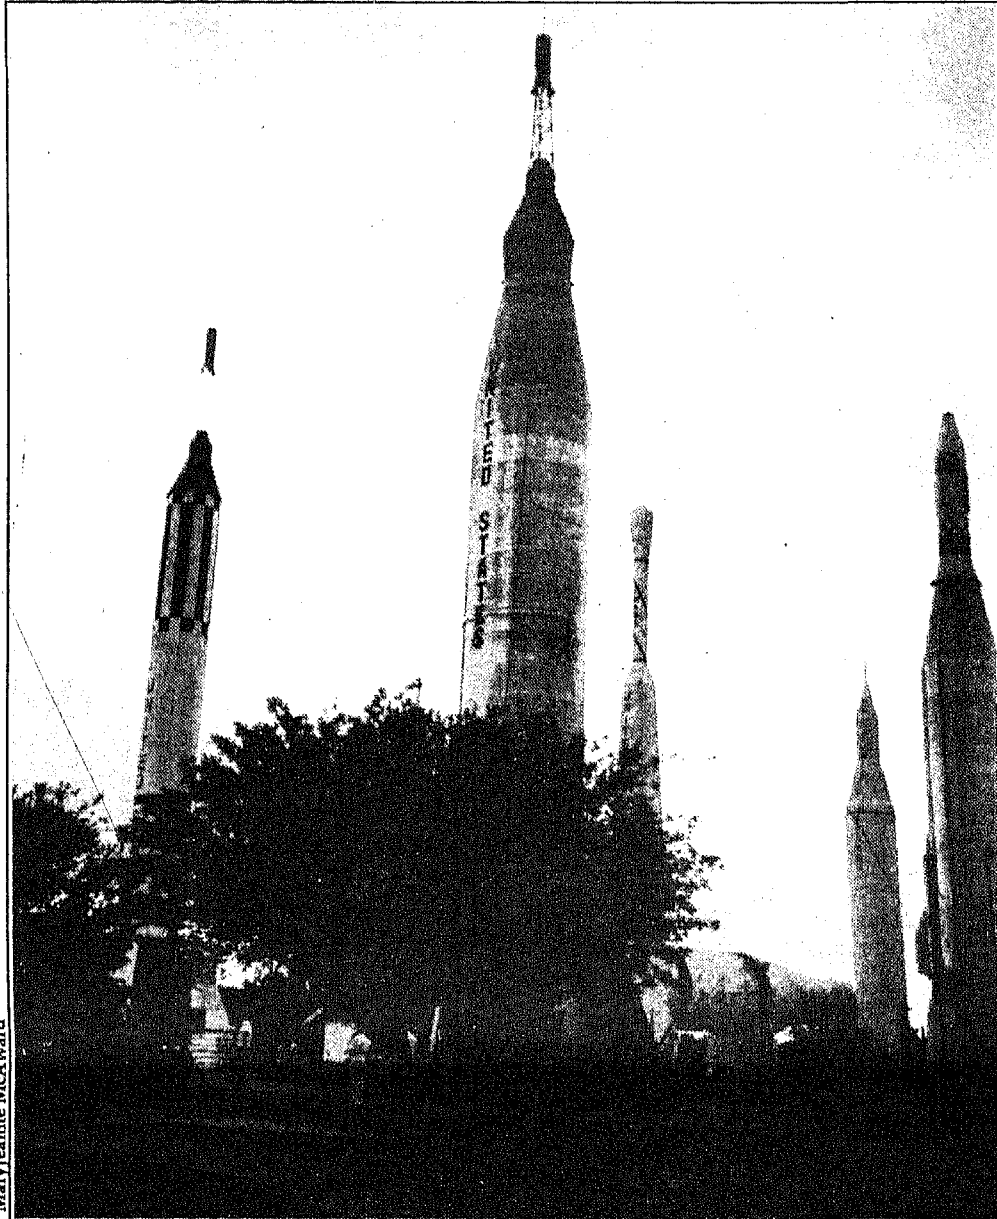

Such hometown touches make one wonder just how deep the loss of the Challenger was felt in these parts where many people are employed by the space program and the economic ripples of that program spread far.

Space junkies, in one hand a Twinkie and the other a model of the Lunar Landing Module, before a black and white TV featuring a rocket launch televised from Cape Canaveral with live feed from the space facility at Huntsville, Alabama, a generation of children grew up with the program from the first Mercury launches, through the Gemini and Apollo programs.

Back then teachers accepted parent excuses for children kept home "sick" on launch days; without televisions in most classrooms who could blame parents for keeping their kids home? Their own parents most likely scoffed at the thought of a man on the moon.

Strolling the Rocket Garden outside the NASA center, one feels small beside tall, gleaming rockets from the various eras of the space program; rocket engines; a model of the Lunar Landing Module; and huge satellite dishes which tracked the early flights in orbit.

The Mercury and Gemini rockets appear crude, the shuttle the height of technology, to late 20th century eyes...but how crude will our shuttle appear to residents of these parts 300, 400, 500 years from now?

Retired rocket gardens dot the landscape at Cape Kennedy.

Perhaps the men and women of the future who travel into space will fly the same colors the thousands in all areas of the space program have always flown.

The bravery and desire to further bounds of human knowledge that allowed men to fit themselves in tin cans atop giant sticks of dynamite in the 1960's showed a new evolution when the shuttle program picked itself up, shook off the dust of the Challenger explosion and leaped back into space.

Not to be missed on a visit to NASA is the on-site, IMAX wide-screen theater presentation of "The Dream is Alive," an in-depth documentary about the shuttle program.

Much of it features footage of a number of astronauts killed in the Challenger explosion and the film is dedicated to them.

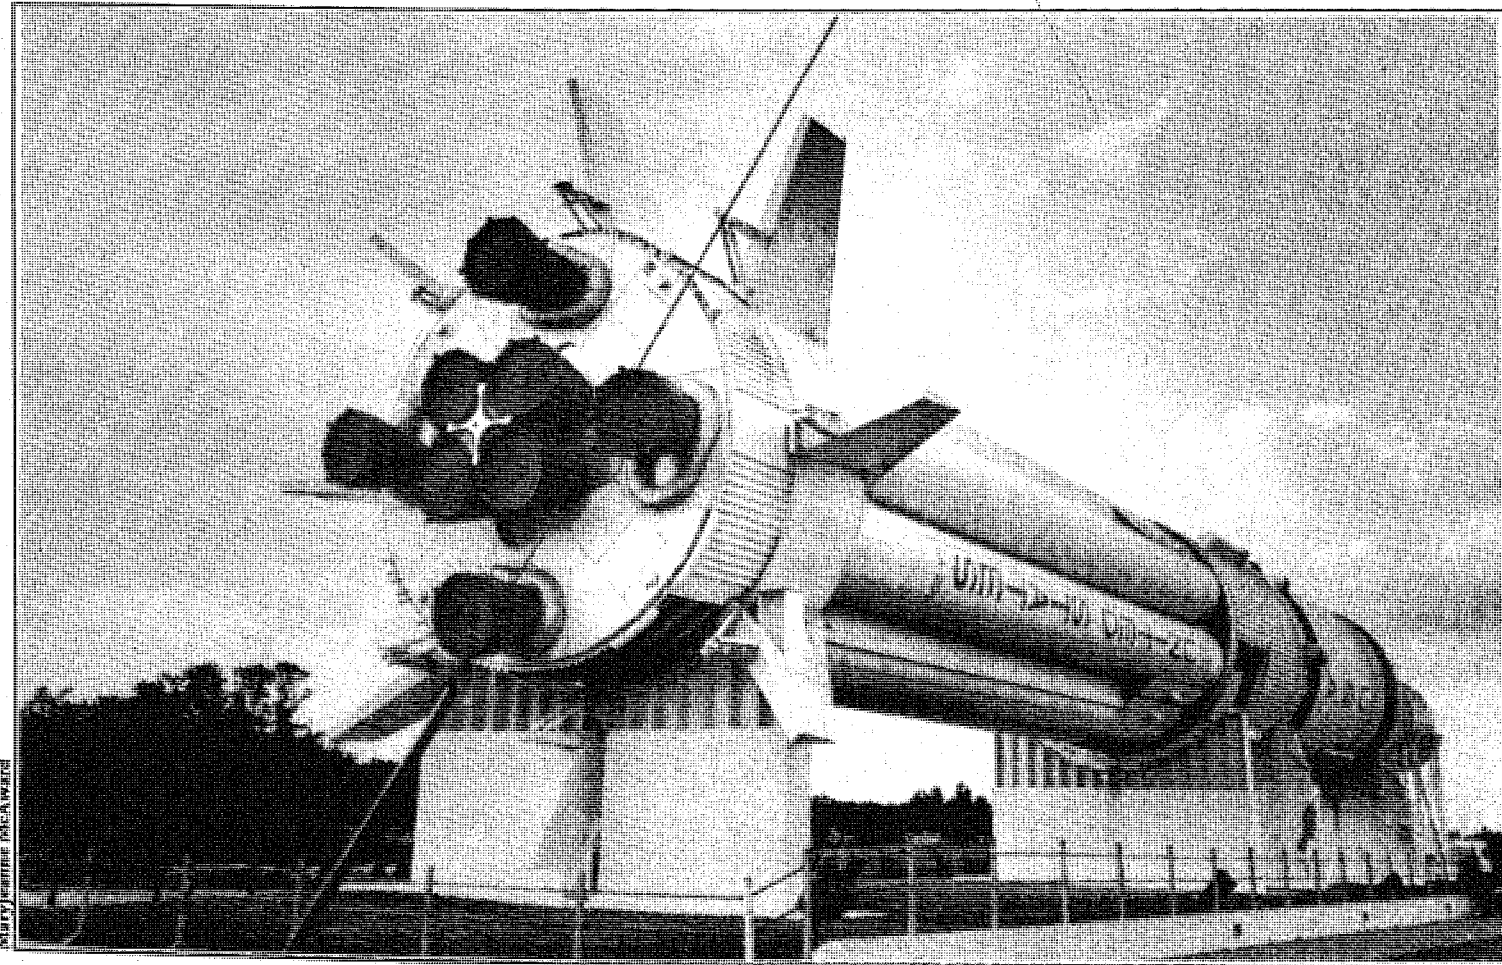

It features a candid look at life within the shuttle as well as stunning footage from the camera mounted atop the shuttle's cargo bay doors.

The cargo bay is on top of the shuttle, as seen when it comes in for a landing, and the doors are open when the shuttle is in orbit. The cargo bay usually faces Earth.

During the film, a variety of experiments are performed from the bay—among several the raising of a yards-wide, 100 foot tall, photovoltaic panel which at the end of the experiment folded into a box seven inches tall, and the retrieval of a satellite.

In the spirit of international cooperation, more and more countries are training men and women for work and life in space.

What's next...a Mars voyage...travel at lightspeed...meeting another civilization somewhere out there, like man exploring the world beyond his doorstep?

Expanding space means expanding programs for Library

By Marianne Strickland
Staff Writer

When the new Sanibel Public Library building opens its doors to the community it will be offering an intellectual service of much broader scope than was possible in the previous space.

The mission of the library as stated in their building program statement is "...to improve the quality of life of the total Sanibel community by serving as an intellectual center—providing a variety of reading, listening and viewing materials to meet the information needs and recreational interests of the people."

As stated in the library building program statement, first among the goals of the Sanibel Public Library is to provide a strong collection "that includes material that reflects the interest of patrons as evidenced by utilization" and also to provide reference and intellectual requirements of a wide variety of residents even though the materials may have a low level of utilization.

This is the bold and broad range of materials and services which Library Director Patricia Allen visualizes as she scans and affectionately touches various areas drawn on the blue-print of the new library interior.

"The board and staff have solicited input from the community as to what they'd like to see included in the new library, even sampling the comfort of new furniture. We've incorporated these suggestions in our plans," says Allen.

A major difference will be found in the children's environment. There will be a raised storytelling area with a couple of steps where pre-schoolers can climb up to a table of their size to look at a book. A puppet theater will have one corner.

Browsing bins, a new feature, will provide easy access to interesting books for little hands to reach. There will be a listening and viewing area for recorded stories and videos so small ones' imagination can be captured in a number of ways. Different size tables will be placed around the area for different size children.

On Allen's wish list for the children's section is a large aquarium and someone to tend it.

Adjacent to the children's section, to concentrate all "noisy" functions in one area, there will be a space to listen, watch, or preview an expanded collection of audio-visual material. Recorded music, in the form of compact discs, will be available. The music collection will be chosen from suggestions of the American Library Association.

In the long wing of the "L" shaped interior will be the adult section of the new facility boasting several significant innovations. There will be improved magazine shelving to allow better visual scanning of the publication covers. The new Info-Track system where articles by subject-matter can be retrieved from 400 plus publications will share the magazine section.

An archives-conference room to house the printed history of the islands is planned. The historical museum doesn't have adequate provision for storing the printed word. Also a library of oral history tapes are being collected to add to the treasure.

Study carrels will share the far side of the library most distant from the entry, check-out counter, audio-visual, and children's areas.

Soft seating for casual reading, a good number of tables for serious spreading out, and a screened reading porch with rocking chairs overlooking the pond should comfortably suit any patrons' reading need.

Finally, there will be space provided for a reference librarian, which Allen says is budgeted now but no space is available in the present facility.

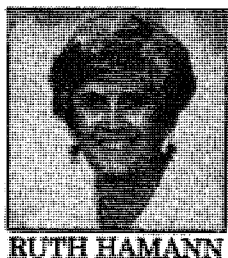

An art corner is being planned with carpeted wall for quick, easy hanging of a group of paintings in addition to picture molding on other walls. The library's ever-changing visuals by the Sanibel-Captiva Art League is considered a valuable asset.

The two-story lobby with elevator and stairs provided from the ground floor will contain glass cases with an attractive permanent shelf display.

"We'll have improved access by computer to inter-library loans so we will be able to borrow books from all over the country," Allen says. "I think the City of Sanibel should be commended for their understanding of community needs and the importance of arts to the community. A library houses the printed form of the arts."

Allen prefers the Sanibel library system of separateness from government bureaucracy to the conventional library system. Some of the benefits of local control which she mentions are the ability to set hours, fast response to hiring needs, more efficient use of resources, and getting hot books on the shelves the day after publication.

Specific requests for books the public would like to see added to the library's permanent collection should be given to Director Allen who welcomes discussion of users' needs and looks forward to molding the new library to warrant Sanibel's continued pride.

William Trevor's latest collection of stories is a good read

By Mary Coleman
Special to the Island Reporter

There is something about the face of a great writer, particularly when he is Irish. The Nobel laureate Samuel Beckett, vaudevillian for the apocalypse, had a face which demanded to be etched. It was as covered with wrinkles as a linen apron wadded and left in the clothes-basket for years on end. The cares of the world and the attempt to render them into literature account for this effect, aggravated by the Irishman's well-known thirst.

Although his style is not quite as parched and bleak as Beckett's, William Trevor is an Irish writer whose bookjacket photo forewarns the reader that something uncanny lurks within the pages—something of pixies and famine, of old stones and unwashed bodies.

A member of the Irish Academy of Letters, his growing popularity in this country is largely due to The New Yorker, the premier market for the short story.

Although he has a few novels to his credit, it's stories he's known for—stories with the mythical element of a tale about them.

An encyclopedic sampling of them can be found in the new mammoth volume "William Trevor: The Collected Stories" (Viking 1992 $35). These are not the self-conscious little pieces of abstraction that often pass for short fiction; each of the eighty-eight short stories would seem to pack a wallop, although Page Turner is not about to claim to have read them all. The sheer size of the book makes it unwieldy for bedtime reading; much less polishing off in one turn. It's more the kind of book to be pulled from the shelf on a rare solitary afternoon with a whisky at hand.

In "The General's Day," for instance, meet General Suffolk, hero of Roex and Monchy-le-Preux: "He had cared for women, for money, for alcohol of every sort; but in the end he had found himself with none of these commodities. In his modest cottage he was an elderly man with a violent past; with neither wife nor riches nor cellar to help him on his way." At seventy-eight, he staggers home after an evening at the pub and cries to himself, "My God Almighty, I could live for twenty years."

Many of these stories have a definitely sodden quality. One of the best of this variety is "The Penthouse Apartment," in which a lonely spinster and her Cairn terrier are invited to visit the stylish digs of some neighbors by their maid Bianca. The apartment has been decorated by florists for a magazine photo session. The photographers are to arrive at noon; the owners have gone out to their morning appointments and all is in readiness until Bianca, Miss Winton and the maintenance man begin to celebrate with a tipple of Cinzano and gin.

Miss Winton tries to explain the damage to the penthouse owners when they arrive.

She even tries to educate them on the natural envy of the servant class. But she will not have the dog blamed.

"Miss Smith" is a chilling look at child-lish revenge upon a cruel teacher.

"James was an optimist about Miss Smith. He thought it might be different when the class went on the summer picnic or sat tightly together at the Christmas party, eating cake and biscuits and having their mugs filled from big enamel jugs.

But it never was different.

James got left behind when everyone was racing across the fields at the picnic and Miss Smith had to wait impatiently, telling the class that James would have to have his legs stretched.

And at the party she heaped his plate with seed-cake because she imagined, so she said, that he was the kind of child who enjoyed such fare."

To be sure, these Irish are rather Anglo-Irish, with speech patterns more restrained than voluble. But they have a few surprises up their sleeves for the winning reader.

Earning a living in paradise...it takes two

By Marianne Strickland
Staff Writer

Fourteen years ago, Mick Gurley said "Good-bye, Nashville...Hello, Captiva." He took a job giving sailing lessons. Spending a couple of years teaching, he then went on to captaining OPB (other people's boats). There seemed no lack of captaining jobs around. He helmed lovely ladies with names like, Island Star, Shadow, Silver Lady, and Island Queen II.

For a while he worked for Sea Rescue Company as a commercial diver, cleaning boat bottoms, recovering lost objects, looking for "treasure." Along the way he got his Master Captain license enabling him to captain boats regularly inspected by the Coast Guard and carrying more than six passengers.

But those years all get hazy, like some of those summer afternoons on the water, until that part of his life when he met Cindy. About five years ago, Mick decided to take a sabbatical from boating and went to Virginia to visit family. He met Cindy at a dinner party. She gave him her business card to come into her salon for a haircut. "It wasn't love at first sight," claims Cindy. "We were both going with other people and he was just this cute younger guy and I was already a grandmother." But over the course of several haircuts, they became friends and despite the fact that Mick vowed he would never get married or have a family—they began to fall in love.

Now that sand in Mick's Topsiders kept reminding him of our islands and he decided to treat Cindy to a Captiva Octoberfest to show her the local life. She claims she was so in love and starry-eyed that she loved everything about the visit. "When he took me sailing I didn't even get seasick, but once we got married and moved down here, I couldn't get on a boat without getting sick."

At this time, Scott and Gretchen McPhee wanted to sell their house and buy a boat to sail around the world. Mick and Cindy bought their house in Wulfert, McPhees bought a boat, then Gurleys bought a boat. Gurleys got married, Mick got a family—son Taylor 11, and daughter Sarah, son-in-law Roy, and grandson Ryan. They all moved to Sanibel and Mick started chartering out his 35 foot sloop, New Moon.

Cindy took her hair-styling talents to the salon at South Seas Plantation and worked there for two years. Cindy used a small legacy left her and opened her own salon at the fitness center. She named it Harry Radcliff after her grandfather whom she had never met but had heard fond stories of from her mother.

Business has grown steadily at the salon with at least half of Cindy's clients being local, regular customers. Sometimes she feels like a psychiatrist with people coming in for their therapy and what she laughingly calls "rumor control." She does a lot of men's barbering and women's cuts and color.

Mick's business has grown, too. He takes up to six passengers out for a half or full day sailing—even a cruise to the Keys. Being a licensed Captain and Notary, he can and does perform marriages on board. His most pleasing moment comes when he has taken a reluctant first-time sailor for a cruise and sees the A-ha! smile and hears, "Wow! I love this!"

Gurleys' social life has blended in with their spiritual quest. They began attending services at the Vineyard of the Islands and in addition to feeling more fulfilled, they've met people with whom they shared a philosophy. "We do attend Sunday services when we can," says Mick regarding the Vineyard. "But the real life goes on at Wednesday night meetings in different homes. That's when we really get to discussing life issues."

"We find the social scene crosses lines and isn't based on what you do for a living or how much money you have," agree the Gurleys. "We've found a group of working people whose life style is simple. We're not competing with each other," says Cindy. "Almost every dinner occasion is a pot-luck, where everyone brings a dish. You don't have grand formal dinners hauling out the china and silver."

Since marrying and settling on the islands five years ago, life has held some dramatic challenges for the Gurleys. There were times when odd jobs had to be taken to make ends meet. When Sarah, Roy, and little Ryan moved in with them while looking for an apartment, it was close quarters in the 1100 square foot Gurley residence. Son Taylor, 16 now, finds island life a bit boring at times.

The seasonal aspect of Mick's business can be a little scary. Adjustments are made. Arrangements are agreed upon.

Life smoothes over. If things get a little tense, a bike ride, a walk on the beach can make everything new again.

A conscious decision has been made to live a simpler life than is possible in a city or "north."

"The natural beauty is the payoff," say the Gurleys.

"That and knowing our kids are in a relatively safe environment."

Carolyn Lewis offers catering class

By Marianne Strickland
Staff Writer

On Tuesday evenings in the Staff Dining Room at Edison Community College, a group of ambitious women sit drooling over a long list of menu possibilities provided by Carolyn Lewis, owner of Carolyn's Custom Catering and The Reel Eel. These women want to do-it-themselves—put on their own parties from preparation to presentation.

Over 60 offerings make up just the hors d'oeuvres menu, with entrees, salads, soups, potatoes, vegetables, desserts, and bread choices upping the options to the hundreds.

On the first evening of class students were asked to choose a menu for a possible cocktail buffet, formal dinner, and reception for 100 people. In teams, the women had to agree on what to serve their phantom guests and in a discussion afterward, Carolyn Lewis pointed out cautions and pitfalls encountered in preparing and serving the menus chosen.

Although good food is third on Lewis' list of important elements for any party, it is always what the novice party-giver considers first.

First on Lewis' list is a relaxed hostess, and according to her, this means freedom from work and worry for at least three hours prior to the party. Emphasis in class is therefore placed on planning, before-hand preparation, and time during the party for the hostess to enjoy her guests.

The second most important element to a successful party is the choice of guests. A good mix of people is necessary and Lewis says to keep in mind the objective of everybody having someone to talk with. Divide the guest list into groups of people with like interests...some link is necessary between guests. They don't all have to share similar backgrounds, but too heterogeneous a group will result in a poor conversational mix.

When it comes to the food, Lewis suggests that it be tasty and eye-appealing but something you have not killed yourself doing. Keep it simple but attractive. During the weeks ahead she will be giving suggestions for time-saving techniques and recipes for that simple but savory food.

The cocktail buffet with 25-30 guests, a formal dinner with 8-10 guests, and a reception with 25-100 guests will each have an evening class devoted specifically to the challenges unique to each type of gathering.

Some of the steps that go into the task of entertaining graciously are the types of food to serve for specific occasions, shopping, recipes, pre-preparation, food storage, quantities of food per person, and how to interview and hire a caterer if it all seems too much.

Other considerations Lewis discusses are whether dishes have to be passed around to guests or can be self-served, should guests be allowed to help, will it be sit-down or stand-up, and many other helpful tips and shortcuts garnered from her 11 years of successful catering.

Lewis and her husband bought The Reel Eel on Sanibel 11 years ago and soon learned they would not be able to live on the sale of fresh fish. Their first expansion came simply with providing some carry-out food. That led to party trays. That led to a wedding.

When the fledgling caterers accepted the assignment of a wedding reception, they had no idea of what was involved. In their former lives, both spouses had careers in fields far from the food industry. They had to rent serving pieces, and after preparing the food and loading it into their rickety van, they set off for the wedding reception location.

The air-conditioning in the van broke, the clutch went out on the road, and the van gasped toward the guests with two perspiring nervous people who were thinking, "How did we get ourselves into this?" Fortunately, the client was a Sanibelian who had frequented their store and was delighted with what the Lewises provided. As a matter of fact, another wedding reception request came out of the first and though Dick Lewis said, "Absolutely not!" the couple went on to cater their second wedding reception. The 200 guest affair turned out to be a 400 guest affair but still there were left-overs for everyone on the island it seemed.

Lewis taught herself all she now knows, and learned from her mistakes. This gives her the ability to foresee pitfalls eager hostesses may be blind to when caught up in the anticipation of putting together a really great occasion.

There is nothing like heeding all that good counsel beforehand and not having to go through the high anxiety that usually precedes a home-thrown affair by one or two days and ends in a crash of fatigue and depression the day after.

Burn permit approved

The Sanibel City Council unanimously approved a one-year burn permit for the Sanibel/Captiva Conservation Foundation Tuesday, April 6.

The council also acknowledged the proposed burn schedule for the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge. According to Erick Lindblad, executive director of the conservation foundation, burns are scheduled each year for a number of reasons.

They control the build-up of excessive fuel loads to lessen the impact of potential wild fires; maintain spartina marsh vegetation and control the encroachment of exotic vegetation.

Senior fitness tests reveal surprises

By Marianne Strickland
Staff Writer

As part of the aerobics classes Carla Ferrel instructs for Island Seniors on Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday mornings at the Sanibel Community Center, she recently conducted fitness testing on 50 seniors.

The standards Ferrel used for the tests are set up by the American College of Sports Medicine to be used as guidelines for active seniors.

Ferrel herself is a certified instructor by the American College of Sports Medicine.

Testing was done in four categories: flexibility, cardiovascular health, dynamic strength, and percent of body fat.

Flexibility was tested by sitting on the floor, legs stretched straight ahead, arms straight ahead pushing a box as far toward the ankles as possible. Flexibility is an area greatly affected by aging and most island seniors scored average, with two scoring excellent and one scoring below average.

Cardiovascular fitness was monitored by a one-minute step test with heartbeat and pulse being taken prior to stepping and after one minute of stair-stepping. Cardiovascular recovery proved average or better for all 50 seniors, showing a positive aerobic payoff.

Dynamic strength (abdominal) was tested by sit-ups lying on one's back, feet up on a chair, hands behind the head, and doing as many sit-ups as possible in one minute.

All scored above average, doing about 30 sit-ups in a minute with the highest number completed being 70.

Body fat was measured by calipers, and a formula showed there was no excessive body fat in the group.

All seniors tested were in the safe zone. If body fat measures in the danger zone it can contribute to a heart attack.

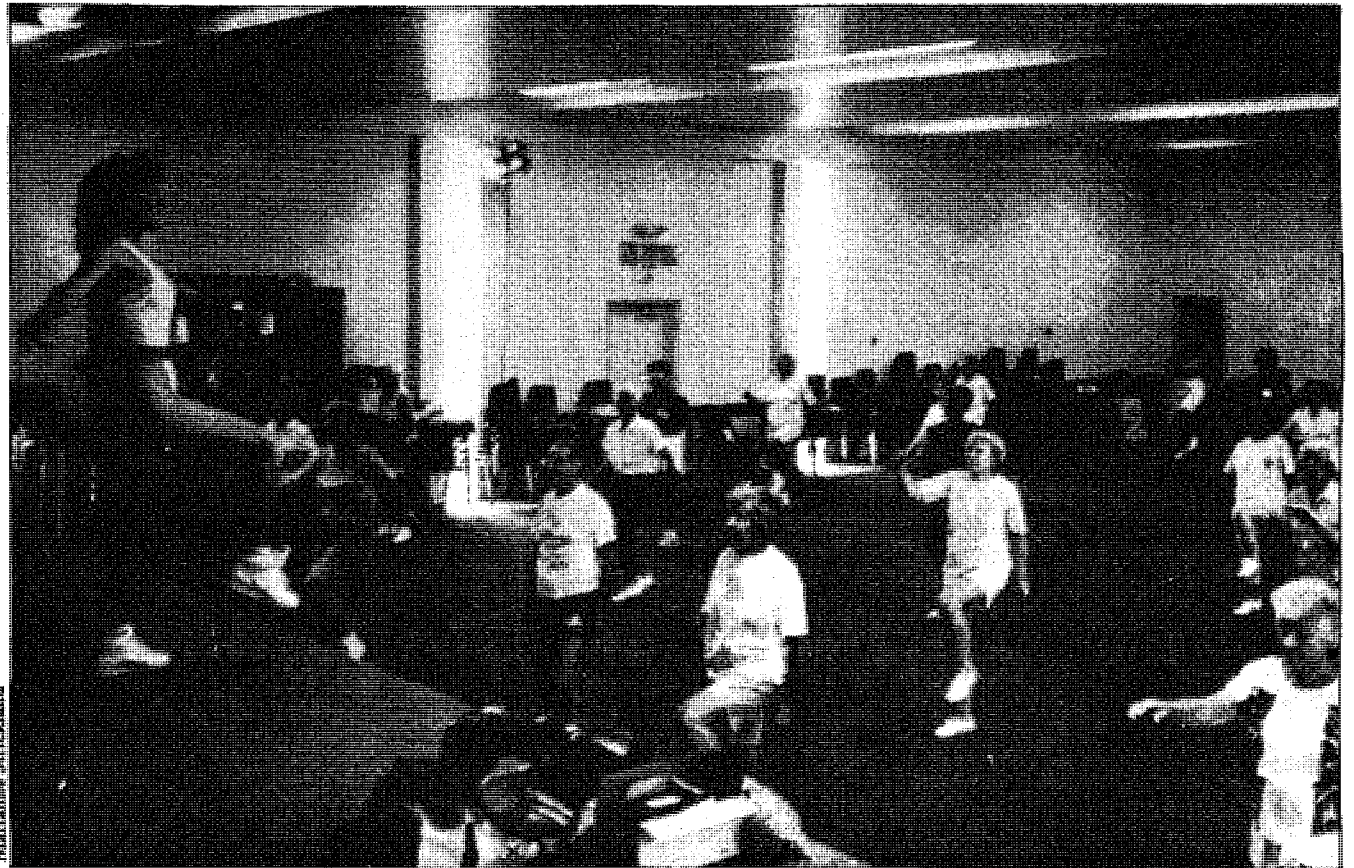

Ferrel has seen much change in seniors who have participated in aerobics over the past two years.

"There has been a great loss in inches, which really makes people happy. One woman has lost eleven pounds. Several who suffer from arthritis and other muscle and bone problems have noted a definite improvement in their flexibility," says Ferrel. "Most say the exercise makes them feel good and they enjoy the opportunity of meeting and socializing with people in class."

All seniors tested answered a health-fitness questionnaire dealing with life-style and stress factors.

Based on that survey plus the results of the activity testing, a biological age was calculated for each individual.

Three seniors tested 20 biological years younger than their chronological age, 8 were between 12 and 16 years younger, 24 were between 8 and 11 years younger, 5 were zero to 4 years younger and two tested older than their chronological years.

Carla Ferrel has seen much change in seniors who've been in her aerobics classes for the past two years.

Those who tested older than their years smoked cigarettes or experienced personal stress in their lives.

Considering 75 years of age as average longevity, three of the seniors should live to be over 100.

Results of the survey revealed a degree of unhealthy alcohol consumption.

"It was greater than I had imagined," said Ferrel, "alcohol use was quite high and some were at six or more drinks daily. I had to tell these people they could not be in my exercise program until they reduced their alcohol intake. One told me to mind my own business and two have cut their intake after finding how injurious it is to health."

"Unfortunately, those people were not just drinking for the fun of it, they were people who had to deal with a lot of stress in their lives—illness of spouse, or other personal problems. I was pleased they were honest," continued Ferrel.

Alcohol in the bloodstream can elevate blood pressure even more than it would normally be elevated by exercise. The heart has to work harder. This is a negative condition under which to be doing aerobics.

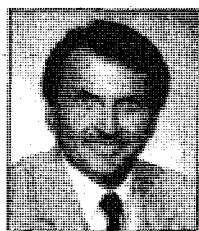

Island seniors are feeling good and learning more about living healthy as well as longer. The consensus is that

Ferrel is the best senior aerobics instructor to be had—participants in the class who headed north took with them a 45-minute senior aerobics video which Ferrel had made of the group.

They do not want to miss out on their fun while away from Sanibel.

Aerobic class videos are available through Island Seniors for $10.95.

Old Bailey store nears completion

Restoration of the 1927 Bailey store continues as fixtures and supplies to stock the shelves are not prime targets of the Historic Preservation Committee, according to spokesperson Mary Bell.

More than 40 letters have been sent by volunteer Milbrey Rushworth to grocery suppliers of the era, seeking vintage wrappers and containers.

Already in stock are laser-printed Hormel reproduction labels from the 1920s and '30s, a 25-pound flour sack from Gold Medal and promises of assistance from Dole and Campbell Soup.

Local donations include an old-fashioned, wall-mounted coffee grinder from Dottie Stearns.

Still needed are barrels, nail kegs, wooden crates, vegetable bins, a rolltop desk, ice box and a 1920s table suitable for an old typewriter.

The recent fund raiser featuring the Bailey brothers—Francis, John and Sam—was an artistic as well as financial success, organizers reported, and videos of the "reminiscence in the old store" will be available soon for $20.

The store is slated to open to the public November 1.

The 1927 structure stood on the bay side of Sanibel, opposite Punta Rassa, until December, 1991 when it was moved to the island historical site. It joined the former Clarence Rutland house which is the Island Historical Museum. The Reed Post Office and Miss Charlotta's Tea Room are also on the site awaiting restoration and once complete, the area will be known as the pioneer village.

Anyone interested in donating items or helping the museum should call 472-4682 Wednesday-Saturday.

Comments from the Committee of Neighborhood Associations

By Jon Liljequist
CONA member

At its regular April meeting, the Committee of Neighborhood Associations (CONA) heard a presentation by Erick Lindblad, executive director of the Sanibel/Captiva Conservation Foundation (SCCF), relative to the city's surface water management plan.

The SCCF appears to be taking the position that higher water levels in affected areas will tend to attract more birds and other desirable wildlife. Yet SCCF appears genuinely concerned about several subdivisions in those affected areas that might experience some adverse effects on septic systems and certain landscaped foliage. CONA will be keeping an eye on what develops.

CONA's delegates voted to present the Sanibel City Council with a position paper relative to below-market-rate housing (BMRH). This was read and presented to the council at its regular meeting, May 4. In essence, it asked the council not to continue increasing otherwise lower land parcel densities for new BMRH projects; to get a handle on ever increasing subsidies to BMRH that drive taxes up and to reduce overhead costs.

CONA believes that Community Housing and Resources (CHR), the management organization for BMRH, should properly only manage units rather than be involved in a myriad of other activities that drive costs up.

At its regular May meeting, CONA delegates discussed the new sign ordinance, vehicular clutter and what we might do about it, abuse of the sticker lane at the toll booth, the city's employee compensation plan, lack of due process in the property assessment appeal procedure, fee parking at Sanibel's beaches and more.

Ernie Klaudt, planning commission chairman, was the guest speaker at the May meeting. He addressed a number of issues certain to be controversial in the year to come.

June 10, Planning Commissioner Dick Downes will be addressing other issues on CONA's agenda. Anyone wanting to attend the meeting should call 472-0805.

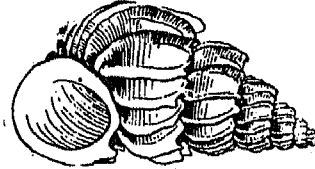

One of our aims is to keep homeowners abreast of issues that do or will affect their property as well as the ambiance of this very special island.

Boating

Game and Fish Commission officers out in force this weekend

Statewide, every available officer from the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission will be patrolling state waterways and watching boaters from the air this Memorial Day weekend, in a crackdown on unsafe boaters.

"More people are out on the water Memorial Day, Fourth of July and other holidays," said Bob Poole, boating safety coordinator for the commission. "We increase patrols and air surveillance to keep things safe and reduce boating fatalities."

Although state law does not prohibit people from drinking while boating, it's against the law to operate a boat while intoxicated. Boating under the influence, or BUI, is one of the leading causes of boating accidents, according to the commission.

Last year, more than 1,000 boating accidents and 80 fatalities were recorded in Florida—the national high.

"Wave action and the dehydrating effects of the sun and wind make people less aware of their intoxication," Poole said. "Most boaters who have been drinking don't realize their reaction time has been impaired until they crash into a dock, collide with another boat or run over a swimmer.

Last year, 22 BUI arrests were made during the Memorial Day weekend.

In addition to watching for persons boating under the influence of alcohol, officers will conduct safety inspection checks. One of the things they will look for is the presence of personal flotation devices (PFDs).

"We can't overemphasize the importance of personal flotation devices," Poole said, adding eighty percent of all boating fatalities occur when the victims drown because they don't have PFDs or won't wear them.

To combat Florida's record high in boating fatalities, the game and fresh water fish commission urges boaters to take its free boating safety course.

As part of this year's boating safety campaign, notices listing scheduled courses are being included with the boat registration renewal forms in the five Florida counties in which 60 percent of the state's boats are registered.

"Boaters need to know that it is not enough for them to be careful drivers. Not everyone is conscientious," Poole said. "Taking a boating safety course may be the best way to prevent accidents."

For more information on boating safety courses contact the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission in Tallahassee, (904) 488-4676.

Safe boating week

National Safe Boating Week is an event which focuses attention of recreational boaters on safety afloat and the importance of safety on and around the water.

Sanibel Mayor Mark Westall will issue a proclamation about Safe Boating Week at the city council meeting Tuesday, June 1.

Members of the Sanibel/Captiva chapter of the United States Power Squadrons will offer boating safety information and free vessel inspections at the Punta Rassa boat ramp from 6:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, June 5 and 6; the group will do the same at the Sanibel boat ramp from 6:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. the following weekend, June 12 and 13.

Police watch

PROWLER—A Periwinkle Way woman reported a white male in his 20's allegedly banging on her window early Tuesday morning, May 25.

Police checked the area with negative results.

ALLIGATOR—A Sandcastle Road man complained of an alligator that allegedly swam toward him when he was in his yard Monday evening, May 24.

Police arrived and observed an eight foot alligator in the middle of the pond. Assistant City Manager and Alligator Control Officer Bill Mills was to be notified of the complaint.

NO PERMIT—Police received reports of two men soliciting on Sanibel Monday afternoon, May 24.

An officer spoke with one of the men, who said he worked for a Tacoma, Washington firm that sold cleaning products.

The men did not have permits and both were advised not to sell on Sanibel without same.

DEAD BATTERY—An off-duty Sanibel police officer used his personal boat to retrieve a boater in distress with a dead battery Monday afternoon, May 23.

FOUND—Two pairs of eyeglasses were found at either end of the island and turned in to police Monday morning, May 24.

REPORT FOR INSURANCE—Monday morning, May 24 a Sandcastle Road woman reported her pool screen enclosure damaged by a nine-foot alligator who failed to use the door earlier that morning.

The illegal entry and use of her pool was reported to the police for insurance purposes.

DOG HIT—Police responded to a report of a dog hit by an unknown car on West Gulf Drive Sunday night, May 23 and found a brown terrier severely injured.

The dog died at the scene. Police were unable to locate the owner, a Lake Murex Circle man, but an employee of the owner arrived and took possession of the dog.

SUSPICIOUS—Police responded to a reported suspicious vehicle on West Gulf Drive and found a real estate salesperson showing a home to a prospective buyer Sunday morning, May 28.

RETURNED TO OWNER—Police responded to a reported loose dog on West Gulf Drive, but arrived in sync with the dog's owner, who retrieved his pet Saturday evening, May 22.

LOOSE DOG—A North Yachtsman Drive man reported a large black Lab running loose in the area Saturday afternoon, May 22.

The dog was not located but police spoke with its owner a short time later.

ASSISTANCE—Police spoke with a Cincinnati, Ohio man, who had allegedly been walking in a disoriented manner on Periwinkle Way Saturday afternoon, May 22.

The man said he had a nerve disorder but did not require assistance.

No further action was taken.

INJURED—Police responded to a report of an injured alligator on Sandcastle Road Friday afternoon, May 21.

The three and a half foot alligator had apparently been hit by a car and was dead when police arrived. The Department of Public Works was to dispose of it.

SUSPICIOUS—Police investigated a report of two white males on Palm Ridge Road, attempting to sell off-brand, boxed electronic equipment Friday afternoon, May 21.

Officers were unable to locate the two males and there was no record for the reported vehicle tag number.

HARASSING PHONE CALL—A Sandpebble Way woman told police her son-in-law received a harassing phone call from a man who claimed a right to fish in the man's privately owned lake on Tarpon Bay Road Saturday afternoon, May 22.

DRIVING UNDER THE INFLUENCE—Milton Scott Terrell of Wauchula was cited for driving under the influence of alcohol, leaving the scene of an accident and careless driving after he rolled his vehicle on Casa Ybel Road Saturday night, May 22.

Terrell failed a field sobriety test and a breath test. He was booked at headquarters and transported to the Lee County jail.

WALKING UNDER THE INFLUENCE?—Police were unable to locate a white male, possibly drunk and allegedly weaving, as he walked along West Gulf Drive Saturday night, May 22.

FOUND—A Bulova watch found on Sanibel was turned over to police Saturday morning, May 22.

The Island Seniors open bowling produced two winners Monday, May 24. High scoring woman was Alice Kylo with a 132. High man: Frank Rosen with a 195.

Monday, May 17 produced the following winners:

Nancy Darling won the women's division with 156; Frank Rosen won the men's with 199.

Seniors bowl for fun at 1 p.m. each Monday at Beach Bowl, 17651 San Carlos Boulevard. For more information, call 472-1235.

Basketball camp set

Two basketball camps are being offered this summer at Canterbury School's gym.

The camps are taught by Terry Kelly and are open to both boys in girls in third through eighth grades.

Sessions are 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. June 14-17 and 8 a.m. to noon July 26-30. The cost is $60 per child each week. For more information, call 481-4323.

Sundial tennis tourney

The Sundial Beach and Tennis Resort on Middle Gulf Drive will host the 11th annual 25 and 35 Tennis Championships Friday, June 11 through Sunday, June 13, on the resort's clay courts. This annual event is sanctioned by the United States Tennis Association (USTA) and Florida Tennis Association (FTA) and has received designated status, important for state ranking purposes.

With top-ranked players competing in the event year after year, it has earned the reputation as one of the strongest tournaments in the state. There is more than $1,000 prize money.

There will be divisions for men and women 25 years and older in singles and doubles, and men and women 35 and over in singles and doubles.

In addition, a consolation tournament will be held for those who do not advance to the second round.

Deadline for entry is 6 p.m. Tuesday, June 8. The Sundial will offer a special tournament room rate for participants.

For reservation information call (800) 237-4184; for tournament information and entry forms call 395-6016.

Learn to dog-paddle

Prayer of the Blessed Virgin (Never known to fail). Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven. Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me here you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request.) There are none that can withstand your power.
Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee. (Three times.) Holy Mary, I place this prayer for your hands. (Three times.) Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. Grateful
thanks. MAS
